

SKHOSANA HEEDS CALLS TO 'RETURN, RESCUE ASA'

● People who removed him, he says, now want him back

By NEVILLE KHOZA

Former Athletics SA (ASA) president Aleck Skhosana says he's responding to calls by people who want him to "come back and fix the mess at the federation."

Skhosana is challenging incumbent James Moloi in tomorrow's election in Kempton Park for the top leadership of the athletics body. Other candidates are Shireen Noble and Harold Adams.

Skhosana served two terms before losing to Moloi four years ago. "The ASA constitution allows me to run again," he told Sowetan yesterday.

"I'm a member in good standing, and

I've been approached by people since 2022, saying I should come back. They say they made a mistake in removing me, [and that] they were misinformed.

"The ship is sinking, and this year again the same people came to see me, saying I should come back. When athletics is declared as an embarrassing mess by the lawmakers, who give money to sports to regulate, I said 'let me come up and make myself available'."

He was referring to the dressing down Moloi received when he and his delegation appeared before parliament's portfolio committee earlier this year.

Skhosana also highlighted where he thinks the federation needs to be improved. "My vision and mission is to make ASA great, bigger, stronger and a major force in the world of athletics as we've done in the past. I will fill the [CEO] position and hire a general manager who'll run the affairs of ASA," he said.

Despite being endorsed by only one province, KwaZulu-Natal, Skhosana remains positive he will receive the required votes tomorrow.

"People will vote for me. ASA says people must be nominated by their province. It means that if you stay in Gauteng, you will be nominated by people from Gauteng.

"It doesn't matter how many people have nominated you, what matters is to be nominated – like I am. If I win, so be it, if not, it's fine."
