

Nkwe resigns, cites ‘difficult working environment’ at Proteas

Board to ask assistant coach to ‘reconsider’

By Tiisetso Malepa

The Proteas will leave for Sri Lanka for a six-match white-ball series this week but may do so without their assistant coach Enoch Nkwe for the three-match ODI series and three T20Is in Colombo from September 2 to 14.

Nkwe has quit the Proteas and stated in his resignation letter that the working environment within the team management has become a contaminated space for him to continue to work in.

Efforts to reach Nkwe were unsuccessful, but several sources close to the situation have confirmed his resignation, saying the Cricket South Africa (CSA) board asked the assistant coach to reconsider.

“Enoch wrote a letter of resignation and handed it in. The board, after hearing of his resignation and reading the contents of the letter, refused to accept it and instead summoned the assistant coach to come and state his case before them, because his reasons for leaving are serious and very concerning,” said an insider.

Nkwe’s main gripe, according to the insider, is that he feels sidelined from the running of the Proteas and he’s not involved in the decision-making.

“Nkwe feels that his inputs as assistant coach are not valued and taken into consideration. He feels he has been reduced to being a ‘cones boy’. He does not feel he is part of the team.

“The other concerning issues is discipline within the Proteas, which Enoch is not happy with.

“The conduct of some senior players and members of the team management in terms of discipline leaves a lot to be desired,” said the source.

The Proteas white-ball squad assembled at the North West University Sports Village in Potchefstroom on Sunday to begin preparation for their tour to Sri Lanka.

Bowling coach Charl Langeveldt and fast bowler Junior Dala will no longer take part in the tour due to Covid-19 protocol-related reasons.

Dala has been replaced by Lutho

Sipamla and Titans head coach Mandla Mashimbyi will replace Langeveldt, while Justin Sammons has been called up into the management team as a batting consultant.

The team departs tomorrow, and it is not clear if Nkwe will be part of the travelling party.

CSA board chairperson Lawson Naidoo said he was in afternoon meetings when contacted for comment yesterday, but Sowetan’s sister publication TimesLIVE corroborated Nkwe’s resignation with more than five independent sources.
